

As I sat in my seat at the ceremony, I was dreaming of all the marvelous things that awaited me inside. After that I awoke from my daydreaming and realized that Chris was reading his essay. By then I knew the grand opening of the Mississippi Children's Museum was about to begin.

I took a big breath and walked over to the door. After the door had opened I sprinted past it. I looked around as if I couldn't believe my eyes. Everything looked fantastic! There was a Gastro Climber where you got to be food after it had been swallowed which of course I did. Then Raleigh and I did spin art over at the Art Center. I also loved the Construction area where you got to build things. Everything was amazing and I loved it! It is a museum that no one will expect.

This fabulous museum is a kid's whole imagination under one building. It's a place where you don't have to be a kid to feel like a kid. The Mississippi Children's Museum is a place with color, wonder and creativity. You will love to be there when you visit.
