

Burr... I was sitting on the cold bench anxiously waiting to run, dash, and jump into the amazing place, The Mississippi Children's Museum.

There are many reasons why you should go and take a tour of the glamorous museum. This museum is just no ordinary museum. I'll tell you why it's special. There will be many things to choose from. My three favorite stations were: Painting Outside the Lines, The Digestive Stomach, and Construction Building.

Painting Outside the Lines is where you have a choice to paint with your hands or a paintbrush and express your imagination with paint. You can also H2O paint. That is when you put a piece of paper about the size of a postcard on a spin machine then you press the "on" button. After you squirt all types of paint you want on the paper. Finally, presto, you have made your own H2O painting.

Next you have the Digestive Stomach which is when you travel through this huge stomach on your knees and you're the food. At the end of your journey, you're dumped into a bouncy toilet.

Finally, you can go to the Construction Building Center. You will be able to build a wall. One person gets on each side. Then you have to use teamwork to make your wall. When your wall is completed, you have to take it down step by step.

If you intend to go, I hope you have a great and fun time like I did. I hope I've persuaded you enough to go.
